The Queen- her daily programme on the board of Britannia

(copied on the board of Britannia in the docks of Edinburgh)

Put the activities in the correct order and try to add the exact times. Then discuss with your partner, ask him questions.

e. g. What time does the Queen wake up?

	After breakfast the Queen retires to her Sitting Room to start work with her Private Secretary on the official documents which arrive daily on Britannia from various Government departments.
	The Queen dresses for dinner in her bedroom.
	Back to work on the official papers until lunchtime.
	Time for afternoon tea. This is taken in the Sun Lounge and would often consist of wafer-thin cucumber and smoked salmon sandwiches and pastries served with tea in the finest bone china cups.
	Dinner is served.
	The Queen retires to bed, and everybody follows her.
	Coffee break and a chance for the Queen to view the chart in the Sun Lounge showing Britannia's position and distance travelled overnight.
	The Queen spends the afternoon working on private correspondence.
	The Royal family gather for drinks with the Admiral before moving to the State Dining room.
	The Royal family retire to the Drawing room for coffee, liqueurs and chocolate mints. The rest of the evening may be spent playing the cards, doing jigsaw puzzles or just enjoying conversation.
	Her Majesty the Queen is woken by her personal maid and is served a cup of tea with milk. The maid prepares the Queen's bath to the correct temperature.
	Her Majesty meets her Dresser to discuss jewellery and dress requirements for that evening.
	The Queen and the members of Royal Family gather in the Dining Room for a buffet lunch.
	The Queen takes breakfast in the Sun Lounge.
